

REAL ACHIEVEMENT SCORED BY LONDON NAVAL CONFERENCE

Agreement Reached On Disarmament by Three Countries

HAVE COMPROMISE

Few Days Remain for Operation As Five-Power Organization

By Harry R. Flory
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent
LONDON, Apr. 10.—With apparently only a few more days to live as a five-power organization, the London naval conference today scored its first real achievement—a final and complete agreement on disarmament between the United States, Great Britain and Japan.

At a meeting of the heads of these three delegations this morning, all details of the three-power agreement were decided upon.

These final negotiations necessitated a compromise by the British and Americans. They were forced to concede to Japan the right to retain the battle-cruiser Kongo, which was to have been scrapped within two years. The vessel will be converted into a training ship.

The Americans retained the right to convert one of her battleships which otherwise would have been scrapped in the near future, into a training ship also. The British made a similar proviso, so instead of scrapping five battleships, she will retain one for training ship use.

According to the agreement with the Japanese, they are allowed to lay down 17,000 tons of submarines immediately for accelerated replacements in order to keep their shipyards busy. They also will retain three cruisers as training ships.

"The way is now clear," a British spokesman announced, "for the conclusion at any rate of a three-power pact. Hope for some sort of a five-power treaty, however, has not yet been abandoned. What can be done in that direction may be cleared this evening."

Heads of the five delegations will meet tomorrow and decide how to wind up the conference—whether with a partial five-power pact with blank spaces for future Italian and French figures, or merely with the tripartite agreement that has now been settled.

Most of the delegations were furiously busy with these final negotiations. British delegates will meet the Italians this afternoon, while the British, Americans and French conferred at intervals throughout the day.

Foreign Minister Aristide Briand of France will see Foreign Minister Dino Grandi of Italy this afternoon, despite the fact the latter is ill in bed. Briand insisted upon seeing Grandi for one last conversation, and the latter assented.

In spite of his previous jocular assertion that he feared he would contract "parity-itis" if he saw Grandi again, Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson held a brief conference with the Italian statesman in the latter's hotel bedroom this morning. The result of the conversation was not made known.

PHILADELPHIA, Apr. 10.—U. S. Senator Joseph R. Grundy, in a letter to friends throughout the State, calls attention to the importance of seeing that all who intend to support him in the Primary are registered this month. His letter is as follows:

"During the events which preceded or were coincident with my appointment to the United States Senate, you were kind enough to write me, expressing your personal satisfaction and extending to me your earnest felicitations.

"Since that time as the lone Senator from Pennsylvania, with Senator Reed attending the Naval Arms Conference in London, I have devoted my entire time to my duties in Washington, and especially to the Tariff Bill, which so importantly affects every interest and every wage-earner in the State of Pennsylvania.

"I am now a candidate for the Republican nomination for the balance of the unexpired term. I base that candidacy upon the principles and

COUNTY SEAT LEGION TO PURCHASE HOME

Legion Home Association Is Formed to Provide A Fund of $12,000

PERFECT ORGANIZATION

DOYLESTOWN, Apr. 10.—In the most enthusiastic meeting held in the history of the A. R. Atkinson Post of the American Legion here attended by close to 100 members the Legion Home Association of the A. R. Atkinson Post No. 216 was formed for the purpose of purchasing a permanent home for the local Post for $12,000 from Claude S. Wetherill.

The new building formerly occupied by the late Howard Atkinson as his funeral home and mortuary is located on West Oakland avenue.

With the purchase of the new home, final settlement for which will be made in the near future, Doylestown joins the ranks of the many other posts in the state in having a home of its own.

A new constitution and by-laws for the Home Association, the governing body who will have complete charge of operation and conduct of the Home, were passed last night.

Fifteen trustees composing the Home Association were elected from a list of twenty-five candidates. When the Atkinson Post membership dwindles down below fifteen, in years to come, the Legion Home will automatically revert to the town or some other organization here, disposal of which is to be made by the president of the Bucks county court, the Chief Burgess and the several surviving members of the Post.

The trustees elected as members of the Home Association were as follows, five to serve for one year, five for two years, and five for three years: Major George Ross, Bartram H. Moore, Russell B. Gulick, Samuel E. Spare, Charles Selner, Howard M. Barnes, Fred Scheetz, A. Russell Thomas, James B. Pretz, Howard W. Schuyler, Ira C. Shaw, Daniel G. Atkinson, Matthew S. Godshall, Arthur Leatherman, W. Carlie Hobensack.

The Home Association will meet this evening to elect its own officers and to complete the charter and incorporation proceedings.

The new home will be renovated and a new heating system placed in the building. The development of the downstairs of the building is planned for the near future although at the present time every bit of available space is leased on the first floor. The second floor of the building is ideal for an American Legion home. Very little alteration is necessary to put the building in first-class condition. The type of construction of the building has been described by builders as one of the finest in Doylestown.

Plans for financing the purchase of the building will be completed by the Home Association. In all probability bonds will be placed on sale in low denominations so that every member of the Legion and all other ex-service men will be able to have a part in paying for the new home.

Packs, troops and ships will be mobilizing all over the county to attend this annual affair. The parts of the program comprise the annual parade at 7, and the camp rally at 7.45. Thirty-four different Scouts, five leaders and two state foresters planted 15,000 seedlings consisting of Norway spruce, red pine, and white pine. A special group of 500 red pine, three-year old seedlings were planted along the Clymer Boulevard. The group of planters were at camp from Wednesday until Sunday. In addition to the planting of the seedlings the Scout camp headquarters was given an attractive coat of cream paint with green trim with the addition of four six-pane windows in the front section. Some progress was also made in the painting of the cub camp shacks with cream paint with brown trim, and the development of pipe-laying for the parade ground drainage system.

Scouts at camp were from Chalfont, Doylestown, Newtown, Perkasie, Trevose and Yardley. Troops from other sections of the county will be invited over during the period from now and when camp opens to assist in other projects.

The southern division training course meeting at Bristol started off with an enthusiastic group of twenty-eight scouts taking the scoutmaster's, Seascout skipper's and leadership training course. The group met at the Wood street school. Courses will be continued during the next two weeks at Newtown and Morrisville. The northern division course will start at Quakertown, with meeting (Continued on Page 6)

DOLL SHOW WILL BE ONE FEATURE OF GIRLS' WEEK

Plans Now Being Perfected For Big Event May 18th to 24th

PLAN MANY CONTESTS

Athletic Events, Marble Contest and Sewing Exhibition Are Included

A doll show is to be one of the big features of Girls' Week. The exact plans for the exhibition have not as yet been worked out. It may be a part of the Hobby Fair.

There was an informal meeting last night of the officers sponsoring the Girls' Week in Bristol, and plans for the big week are rapidly being perfected. It is expected that final and complete plans will be announced at the meeting of the general committee which is to be held Monday night in the Legion Home.

There is going to be a marble contest for the girls, track and field events, hobby fair, poster contest and numerous other contests which will be announced as the plans are completed.

The girls will assemble at the Grand Theater on Saturday morning, May 24th, and there will be a program of a most interesting nature.

The meeting last night decided that while there will be a street parade on the final day of the week, the route to be traversed will be a short one. It is now thought that this route will be from Mill street and the highway direct along the Highway up to the high school at Wilson avenue and Garfield street.

Every effort is to be made to plan a program which will interest every girl in Bristol and the territory which is to be included. Much interest is being shown in the arrangements and it is planned to make this first attempt a highly successful one.

The committee of which Mrs. Harry Pope is chairman desires the services of a number of competent women to aid in the project. There was a very large representation of the organizations of Bristol at the meeting which was held last Monday night but it is desired that there be a larger number at the meeting which is to be held next Monday evening.

The women have decided that the girls of this section are to be given a week which they will long remember and one which will prove so interesting and successful that there will be a demand for its repetition each year.

EUROPEAN INTEREST IN PROHIBITION KEEN

Every Angle Being Watched and Close Tabs Kept on Straw Votes

OPINIONS OF EDITORS

By J. C. Oestreicher

(N. S. Staff Correspondent)

NEW YORK, Apr. 10.—Every angle of the prohibition controversy now blazing in the United States, from straw votes conducted by magazines and colleges to the Congressional hearings in Washington, is being watched with unprecedented interest by the nations of Europe.

Editorial opinion as expressed by the leading newspapers of England and the Continent crystallize into the belief that Prohibition is facing its final showdown. The very near future, Europe believes, will prove once and for all whether the law is capable of being enforced and whether it will remain as an incontrovertible statute.

This widespread interest is motivated by varying purposes. France, which before Prohibition enjoyed a tremendous revenue from sales of its States, is frankly hopeful that the law will be repealed or modified. Statesmen of that country never lose an opportunity of pointing out how, in their opinion, moderate use of the juice of the grape is beneficial to the human happiness.

Germany and England are interested for different reasons. The former nation is undergoing a rather dramatic alcoholic upheaval at the present time. For the first time in history, advocates of temperance and prohibition in that land famous for its beer and its velvet wines, are able to make themselves heard. They have succeeded in pushing through the Reichstag the first of a series of bills aimed at controlling the sale of liquor.

While far from meaning total prohibition, this bill is significant, inasmuch as it restricts the number of saloons, prohibits the sale of hard liquor to minors and provides an earlier closing hour for cafes and beer-houses.

Advocates of temperance in Germany have pointed to Prohibition in the United States as a guiding star on the road to truth. They are vehement in defense of the American law, and claim it has achieved complete success.

German "wets," however, are of a different mind. They declare without reserve that Prohibition in America has been a dismal, total failure, has failed to decrease deaths from alcoholism and, instead of lessening consumption of liquor, has actually increased it.

Consequently, both sides are watching the outcome of the present controversy with a great deal of attention. If Prohibition is upheld, things will continue much as before. Should repeal or modification be decided upon, the whole world-wide structure of Prohibition may collapse, for in most cases the laws governing liquor control abroad have been built on the "splendid example" set by the United States.

So far as England is concerned, prohibition modification by the United States would have the effect of increasing the hat-size of the average Britisher, for the English are almost unanimous in the belief that they have hit upon the road to true temperance. The English scheme is built in three main pillars: 1, cheap beer; 2, expensive whiskey and 3, carefully restricted hours which public houses may open for the sale of drinks.

While big distillers in Britain periodically ask the government to reduce the whiskey taxes, on the grounds this ancient industry of Scottish origin has sustained grave losses because of the closing of the American market, there is no general agitation in England for repeal of the American Prohibition law.

France, however, genuinely sincere in its belief that no man should be deprived of wine with his meals, has always been seriously concerned over American Prohibition. The wine-growers of the Southern part of France are well represented in the Chamber of Deputies, and lose no opportunity of trying to show America how much better it would be if the wassail bowl still were full and the grape flowed red and free.

Total Prohibition propaganda in England and France is negligible, although the World League Against Alcoholism and the Anti-Saloon League are active in their work in those countries. Prohibition advocates in Britain are continually striving for what they call a "local option" measure, which would permit individual communities to decide just what sort of liquor control would be most beneficial for its residents.

The average European is ready to agree that Prohibition is a "noble experiment." He is interested in seeing what the final result of the experiment will be.

KONJOLA PROVES REAL SURPRISE IN STUBBORN CASE

Lady Says She Never Imagined
There Could Be Such A Wonderful Medicine

MRS. KATHALEEN SPRINGER

"For more than two years I was held in the grip of stomach and kidney trouble," said Mrs. Kathaleen Springer, Republic, Pa., near Uniontown. Even my bowels were congested and I was constantly using cathartics. Gas bloating and belching spells followed every meal. I was subject to heartburn and heart-palpitations, shortness of breath and dizzy spells. I had severe back-aches, frequent bladder actions and bilious attacks. My nerves naturally gave way under the strain."

"What a change Konjola made! Constipation was speedily removed and my other organs began to function properly again. Today I eat heartily of my favorite foods and suffer no discomfort. My kidneys are strong again and I am free from back pains. My nerves have grown calm and steady and I sleep soundly and restfully at night. In short, I am in perfect health for the first time in many years and I owe all this happy condition to the power of this great medicine."

When taken for from six to eight weeks, Konjola, the new and different medicine, will work wonders for sufferers from ills of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, and rheumatism, neuritis and nervousness.

Konjola is sold in Bristol, Pa., at Hoffman's Cut Rate store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.—(Adv.)

SPORT NEWS

BASKETBALL POPULAR BECAUSE OF ACTION

By Lowell M. Puckett
I. N. S. Sports Writer
CHICAGO, Apr. 10—Basketball, a comparatively new sport, owes its tremendous popularity, in the main, to two things—speed and action. Rob the game of these two attributes and you have little more than glorified medicine ball tossing. And medicine ball tossing, whether Cabinet members or sophomores do the tossing, is a dreary thing to watch, indeed.

Thus it is perfectly natural that basketball lovers, including fans as well as coaches, should be somewhat alarmed over the "stalling" methods being adopted by so many court teams. Stalling, let it be explained, is the business of doing nothing in a slow and leisurely manner. It used to be that basketball teams stalled only in the last few minutes of the game, and then to protect a slender lead. This was bad enough, but now, what with so many coaches adopting the delayed or "slow-breaking" offense, many games are played in which only infrequent flashes of fast play occur.

The height of stalling was reached recently in an Illinois high school game. The final score was 1 to 2. The winning team, having scored a free throw early in the first period retired to one end of the court and took it easy. They sat on the floor. They conversed with spectators. Refused to take the offense. Their opponents, unfortunately, had little initiative, so the game resulted in a most farcical exhibition.

There is no quarrel with the coach who adopts the slow breaking method of advancing the ball if the idea is really to take the ball down the floor. But the deliberate staller is coming in for quite a bit of condemnation in the Middle West.

Craig Ruby, University of Illinois coach and president of the National Association of Basketball Coaches, has become so concerned over the stalling question that he has addressed a questionnaire to more than 800 coaches asking for statistics on total scoring, stalling, and other kindred subjects. The information gathered will be sent to the rules committee of the coaches' association and to the joint rules committee which formulates the national code.

Ruby's questionnaire is as follows:

How many games, including tournaments, did your team play?
In how many games was the total scoring of both teams less than 57 10? 15? 20? 25?

In how many games was stalling begun in the first quarter? Second? Third? Fourth?

In how many games, when stalling began, did the defense come down immediately and force the game?

Would you favor some change in the rules which would make it impossible for a team to stall for any length of time? In other words, would you favor some rule which would force offensive basketball and make impossible the distasteful stalling games which have been frequent during the season?

In how many games was the "fast break" used all the time by one team or the other?

Do you want the jump center retained?

Has the "no catching" rule at the center jump and held ball been satisfactory?

BRISTOL METHODISTS CHURCH LEAGUE 'CHAMPS'

Bristol won the championship of the M. E. Church League last night by defeating Treviso 35-21.

The game was hard fought throughout with Bristol staging a rally in the second half which gained them the laurels. In the first half Bristol missed many shots that should have gone in but were a little overconfident, the scores at half-time being 13-9.

In the second half they opened up the throttle, with "Reds" Bailey leading the attack, and proved their superiority.

For the victors Bailey was the scoring star, but the entire team played wonderful ball.

The silver loving cup which was won was presented after the game amid the cheers of the fair rooting section which accompanied the Bristol boys.
